Pasture Improvement

Research work done at Cornell University and other centers has shown that there is no general farm crop that pays so well as good pasture. If the best land on the farm is used, if it is limed and fertilized and good grazing methods followed, it will carry 3 cows per acre in full production for six months of the year. Remember that a cow mows 150 lbs. in a hard day's work of 8 hours.

Such success cannot be achieved without the three requisites—good land, good fertilizer and good seed, the three being capped by the proper system of rotational grazing. A cow does her best when the grass is kept at 4-inch height. You can hardly graze too early or too late.

The Cornell pasture formula recommended by Professor Johnstone-Wallace will do more than any other to iron out the peaks and valleys of the curve of pasture production.
